RFS Obligated and Non-Obligated Party Lists

Introduction

Monroe Energy engaged IHS to estimate the number of companies that operate at various points in the refined products supply chain upstream of retailers and to provide lists of those companies. These lists were then compared to a list of companies that may have a renewable fuel standard (RFS) compliance obligation under the current regulatory definition of "Obligated Party".

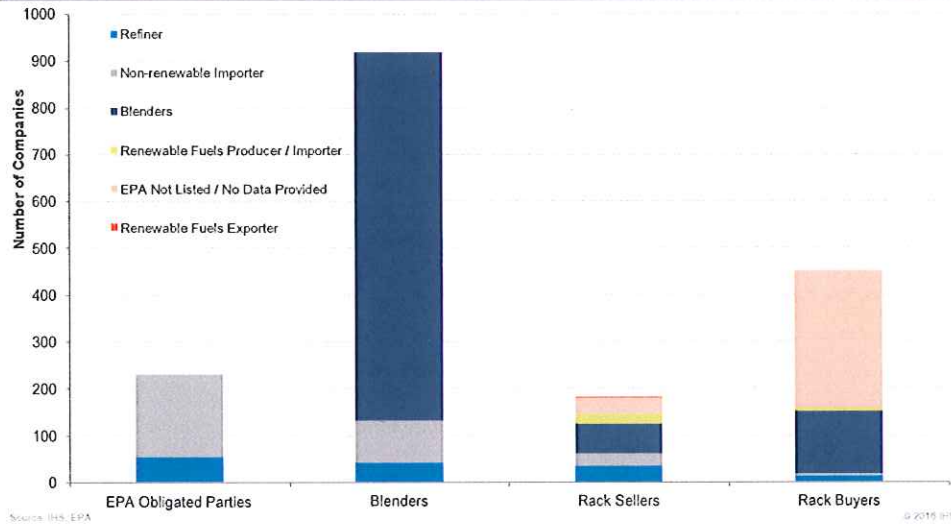

The attached tables were drawn from two sources:

- Part 80: EPA Fuel Programs Registered Company/Facility ID List
- Oil Price Information Service (OPIS) recently acquired by IHS

The following chart and table summarize the number and description of companies we identified for each category.

US Fuels Supply Chain Participants

Designation	Current Obligated Parties	Blenders	Rack Sellers	Rack Buyers
Totals	230	919	181	451
Refiners	52	42	35	13
Non-renewable Importers	178	90	26	6
Blenders	-	787	63	132
Renewable Fuel Producers and Importers	-	-	23	8
Renewable Fuel Exporters	-	-	1	-
Not on EPA fuels list / No data provided	-	-	33	292

Attached Data Tables Descriptions and Assumptions

Tables 1a and 1b. EPA refiners and non-renewable fuel importers:

Source: Part 80: EPA Fuel Programs Registered Company/Facility ID List

The companies in Tables 1a and 1b are the refiners and non-renewable fuel importers from the EPA's "Part 80: EPA Fuel Programs Registered Company/Facility ID List". Combined, the refiners and non-renewable fuels importers reflect the current and potential number of Obligated Parties defined by the EPA. IHS has identified 52 refiners and 178 non-renewable fuels importers for a total of 230 Obligated Parties.

The refiner data from EPA was aggregated by IHS to reflect the number of parent companies and to adjust for known changes in ownership and operational status. IHS used EPA's 'Business Activities' description as the basis.

IHS non-renewable fuels importer data used the EPA 'Business Activities' description as the basis. The data were adjusted to combine corporate ownership and reflect known mergers, acquisitions or closures. US refiners are excluded. IHS did not review the list to determine which companies may not be currently active in the market. However, there are companies on the EPA non-renewable fuel importers list that do not appear in the EIA company level importers data for the last few years (<http://www.eia.gov/petroleum/imports/companylevel/>).

Table 2. All blenders:

Source: Part 80: EPA Fuel Programs Registered Company/Facility ID List

This table lists all of the blenders on EPA's list, including refiners, non-renewable fuels importers and other companies designated as blenders. There are 919 companies on the list comprised of 42 refining companies, 90 non-renewable fuels importers, and 787 blender only companies (designated by EPA as companies with blender in the Business Description).

If the Obligated Party is changed to blenders, the number of Obligated Parties will increase by 688 (from 230 to 919).

IHS consolidated the EPA blender data to reflect changes in ownership as in Tables 1a and 1b. IHS consolidated the data for corporate ownership and to remove duplicates, but did not review the list to determine which companies may not be currently active in the market.

Table 3. Blenders only:

Source: Part 80: EPA Fuel Programs Registered Company/Facility ID List

Table 3 includes companies that are blenders, but are not refiners or non-renewable fuel importers. IHS has identified 787 such companies in the EPA list.

IHS' approach was the same as Table 2.

Tables 4a, 4b, 4c, 4d, and 4e. Rack sellers:

Source: OPIS (recently acquired by IHS)

These tables include companies identified by OPIS that post a rack price for gasoline and/or diesel fuel. There are 181 companies on the list, which includes 148 companies designated by the EPA (35 refiners, 26 non-renewable fuel importers, 63 Blenders, 23 renewable fuel producers and importers, and 1 renewable fuel exporter) and 33 companies that are not on the latest EPA list.

If the Obligated Party designation is changed to rack sellers, the number of Obligated Parties would decrease from the current 230 (Table 1a and 1b) to 181.

The data in tables 4a, b, c, and d is recent OPIS data and sorted using the designations defined in Tables 1, 2, and 3. IHS consolidated the data for corporate ownership and identified companies that are not on the EPA list.

For table 4e, IHS identified companies that post a rack price using OPIS data but are not on the EPA's list.

Table 5. Rack buyers:

Source: OPIS (recently acquired by IHS)

This table shows 451 companies identified by OPIS that buy off the rack. This consists of 13 refiners and 6 non-renewable fuel importers (current Obligated Parties), 132 blenders as defined by the EPA, 8 Renewable Fuel Producers and Importers and 292 companies that are not on the EPA list or they are on the list but no business activity is provided.

For table 5, IHS used data sourced from OPIS and classified the companies using the EPA 'Business Activities' description and identified companies that were not on the EPA list. IHS consolidated the data for corporate ownership.

If the Obligated Party designation is changed to rack buyers, the number of Obligated Parties would increase by 221 (from 230 to 451).

Excise tax list

The IRS has not provided IHS with a list of companies that collect and pay the federal fuel excise tax. However, the IRS defines a Taxable Fuel Registrant as '... an enterer, an industrial user, a refiner, a terminal operator, or a through putter who received a Letter of Registration ...' The IRS also defines a Taxable Event as the removal of gasoline at the terminal rack. These two conditions indicate that the number of taxable entities is likely close to the number of companies that post a price or sell at the rack.
